PRIMARY PLACES WOE FOR 244 KIDS

But every applicant has been allocated to a school

ALMOST 250 children from Haringey have missed out on a reception place at a primary school of their choice.

Figures released last Wednesday from London Councils show that 244 children did not get into any of their families' six choices. However, every child who applied for a primary place has been placed at a school within the borough.

Despite high demand for certain schools across Haringey and catchment areas for some primaries extending to just a couple of hundred metres from the school gates, the figures show that 79.9 per cent of children still got a place at their first-choice school.

And a further 11 per cent of youngsters were allocated either their second or third-choice primary.

Due to the high demand, there will be an extra reception class at St James Primary School in Woodside Avenue, Muswell Hill.

A Haringey Council spokesman told the Advertiser: "Every child who applied for a reception place for September 2014 has been offered a place in a Haringey school. And 90 per cent of on-time applicants have been offered a place at one of their top-three schools and wherever possible at one of their six preference schools.

"Where it has not been possible to offer a child a place at one of their six preference schools, we have offered them a place at the nearest available school to their home address.

"It is common following offers for more places to become available at popular schools as families consider their options.

"We understand that the process can cause concern for parents and children and we have produced detailed information to guide parents/carers through the process.

"We recognise there is high demand for places at Haringey's schools and we are exploring all options to increase local school place provision to help meet demand both this year and in coming years."

Estate gardening project recognised

A GARDENING project on a Tottenham estate has been named runner-up at a national awards ceremony.

The Back2Earth Harmony Garden, on the Broadwater Farm Estate, pictured, was recognised at the Gardening Against The Odds Awards.

The vegetable garden was set up by Martin Burrows and Robbie Samuda, of the Back2Earth Harmony Gardens project. It allows residents to make productive use of their environment, and build a vibrant community spirit, with workshops teaching gardening skills.

Mr Burrows and Keith Shellcross, of Back2Earth, received the award from conservationist David Bellamy last week at a celebration tea party in the great conservatory of Syon House, in west London – home to the Duchess of Northumberland.

The awards, now in their fourth year, recognise ordinary gardeners who triumph against the odds to create places of beauty that brighten the lives of others.

Teen who hid gun in baby clothes is jailed

A TEENAGER who hid a gang member's gun in baby clothes at her home has been jailed.

Carisha Solan, 19, of Lordsmead Road, Tottenham, was sentenced at Wood Green Crown Court last Wednesday alongside known gang member Marlon Golding, 30, of Park Lane Close, Tottenham.

Solan was jailed for five years for possession of a firearm and two years for possession of seven rounds of ammunition, to run concurrently. Golding was jailed for seven and a half years for possession of a firearm and two years for possession of seven rounds of ammunition, with the sentences again running concurrently.

The court was told that police officers from Trident Gang Crime Command executed a search warrant on Solan's home on July 26 last year. They found a Zastava self-loading pistol containing seven rounds of ammunition, wrapped up in baby clothes inside a suitcase.

While the officers were there, they spotted Golding approaching the house. But he quickly went into an adjacent address when he saw the police.

Golding, who has known links to a violent north London gang, was arrested on July 31 – two days after police picked up Solan.

Both had pleaded not guilty to the charges and were convicted at Wood Green Crown Court on March 17.

Primary school joy for eight out of ten choices

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

EIGHT in ten children in the borough will be going to their number one choice of primary school in September.

According to data from London Councils, 85.82 per cent of the borough's children have been given a place at their first choice school.

This means the borough has the sixth highest success rate in the capital for allocating children their top preference of school.

After a number of years in which the council has come under pressure from the South West Enfield Action Group and other lobby groups to increase the number of primary places, education chiefs have welcomed the news that the borough scores in the top ten of authorities able to give parents their preferred choice.

Ayfer Orhan, Enfield Council's cabinet member for education, told the Advertiser: "It is fantastic and, of course, much of this success can be put down to the primary expansion programme that has been in place since 2010."

Although 2.3 per cent of families in the borough were not successful with any of their six choices, Ms Orhan said: "It is a relatively small number of parents and children who have been disappointed."

"When you consider that admissions services at the council had to deal with 4,436 applications that had been submitted on time – the staff have done an outstanding job at allocating places."

This year was the first time that all local authorities in England have published their pupils' allocations on the same day.

A council spokeswoman added: "Enfield Council recognised the need to create additional primary school places."

"The primary expansion programme has been very successful. All parents who applied for places on time have been offered a place."

Enfield beats the London average of 81 per cent of families gaining a place at their top-pick school.

Poker club man convicted of money laundering

A MAN has been found guilty of money laundering offences in connection with an illegal poker den in Palmers Green.

Ahmet Melin, 33, was prosecuted after Enfield Council enforcement officers raided the Big Bluff Private Members Club in September 2012 and discovered it was a front for an illegal poker club.

Commercial poker games require a casino licence and it is council policy not to issue such licences to properties in the borough. The club, in Green Lanes, was staging poker tournaments – all the proceeds from which were illegal – and Melin, of Cowles, Cheshunt, was withdrawing money from the club for his own purposes.

Enfield's director of environment Ian Davis, said: "These are very serious offences and the council took robust action when it became clear the Big Bluff club was a front for an illegal poker den."

"I'm pleased the council's licensing enforcement, trading standards and legal teams worked together to bring this prosecution, which sends out the very clear message that we do not tolerate illegal gambling in this borough."

The Big Bluff club has stopped operating.

Nick Tofiluk, the Gambling Commission's director of regulatory operations said: "This is an excellent example of how a local authority with our support is dealing with illegal gambling in whatever guise it is presented."

"The message is simple – if you offer poker in a club and are breaking the law, action can and will be taken."

Melin, who was found guilty of five offences under the Proceeds of Crime Act when he appeared at Wood Green Crown Court earlier this month, will be sentenced on May 27.

Easter egg-citement at Capel Manor

THINGS got very egg-citing last weekend at Capel Manor as the gardens were overrun by children hunting for Easter eggs.

The annual event for Noah's Ark Children's Hospice, which supports children with life-limiting conditions in north London, saw families taking part in egg and spoon races and comic-drawing classes as well as the egg hunt around the scenic gardens, in Bullsmoor Lane, Enfield.

More than 2,100 people attended the event, which this year was held over two days for the first time and raised £10,000 for the charity, which is based in Barnet.

Priya Singh, community fundraising manager for Noah's Ark, said: "This year's event has been our best ever – we're truly overwhelmed by all the support we have received. In particular, I want to thank all those individuals and businesses, including Love Your Doorstep, who donated Easter eggs, the Rotary Club of Edmonton for organising and running the popular egg and spoon race, Skewbald Theatre for its imaginative shows, the amazing Zoom Rockman for hosting two comic book workshops and our fantastic volunteers and community supporters who helped set up and run stalls at the event.

"And also to all those people who came along.

"The money raised will ensure that Noah's Ark is able to continue to provide much-needed support and services to local children and their families."

'Patients must be better informed'

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

HOSPITAL chiefs need to do more to improve communication with patients, the borough's health watchdog has said.

Following the publication last month of the Care Quality Commission's survey of adult inpatients, Lorna Reith, chief executive of Healthwatch Enfield, said hospitals should address the way patients are communicated with "as a matter of urgency".

Data used from the survey, which was carried out among patients admitted to NHS hospitals in England between September last year and January, ranked the hospital trusts against each other.

Chase Farm Hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, and Barnet Hospital were said to have performed no better than the majority of others surveyed.

Barnet and Chase Farm, where 328 patients responded, performed worse than the majority of trusts in nine areas, including waiting times for planned admissions, waiting times to get a bed on a ward and communicating the risks and benefits of an operation to patients.

The North Mid, where 313

patients were surveyed, was judged worse in eight other areas. The survey found that many patients felt doctors and nurses spoke in front of them as if they were not there and that it was difficult getting answers to questions from nurses or to receive emotional support.

It also found that more patients than at the majority of other trusts lacked confidence in the doctors and nurses treating them.

Ms Reith, pictured, said: "We know that our hospitals have been under pressure and that will explain some of the delays with beds at Barnet and Chase Farm."

"The other issues flagged up by the survey around communication and about the culture at the hospitals – I believe this is something they can put right pretty quickly."

"They must focus on training staff – it is all about putting the patient at the centre of things."

A spokesman for the North Mid said: "We are pleased the survey showed that many inpatients had a good experience."

We fully acknowledge that, although the quality of the care we provide is high, we need to do better in respect of patient experience.

"It is a work in progress which we expect to focus on for several years while we achieve change."

Barnet and Chase Farm had not provided a comment by the time the Advertiser went to press.

Occupy campaigners join Cat Hill housing protest

By Ruth McKee and Daniel O'Brien

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk
daniel.obrien@nlhnews.co.uk

CAMPAIGNERS protesting against a 231-home housing development in Cat Hill have teamed up with a band of environmental activists who have set up camp on the edge of the site.

The Save Cat Hill campaign, which is made up of residents and politicians opposed to the project by housing developer London and Quadrant, has formed an alliance with several members of the Occupy movement to create a permanent presence at the site in Cockfosters.

The activists, who are part of the same group that successfully reopened the axed Friern Barnet Library in 2012, say they plan to monitor the impact of building work on the natural landscape.

Eco-warrior Cimi Starchild told the Advertiser: "Our aim is to encourage and empower people to stand up for their rights and their community."

"We have set up camp to protect the site from further destruction. Twelve ancient trees on the site have protection orders on them, but as far as we are aware the developers have ignored these and felled the trees."

Kim Coleman, leader of the Save Cat Hill campaign, which has continued to fight the development since it was approved by Enfield Council in March last year, said she looked forward to working "hand in hand" with the activists. "We welcome them enormously because we need extra support and these people do know what they are doing," she said.

She added that the activists' constant presence has allowed her to spend more time away from the protest pursuing other avenues of opposition, such as legal challenges.

However, L&Q insists that it has complied with every environmental requirement set before it and that its specialist tree experts and ecologists continue to liaise with Enfield Council and Natural England.

A spokeswoman added: "Our aim is to create a site that will offer improved and more diverse habitats to support wildlife and biodiversity."

On Saturday, campaigners celebrated the merger with a protest party.

An Abundance Festival, celebrating the site's wildlife, is taking place this Saturday and Sunday.

Joining forces: Save Cat Hill campaign leader Kim Coleman, above, and, left, Cimi Starchild and Donnie Vortex, of Occupy

Time is right for a clock tower in Palmers Green

New landmark set to win planning approval

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

PALMERS Green may soon boast its own clock tower as council planning chiefs were set to approve plans for a new landmark last night.

The black clock, which will have three faces and stand 5.5metres tall, will be installed at The Triangle, at the junction of Aldermans Hill and Green Lanes.

The Green Lanes Business Association, which applied to Enfield Council for planning permission, is hoping it will become a landmark that will draw more people to the area.

Costas Georgiou, chairman of the association, said: "The town of Palmers Green was built in 1904 and we got the idea to celebrate the 110th anniversary of our area with this landmark.

"Palmers Green needs a revamp and I thought 'we must do something to mark the event'.

"People know The Triangle as a landmark, but with the clock it will be much better. I believe council planning officers are happy with it and they have recommended it to be agreed."

The clock comes four years after the chestnut tree which stood in The Triangle had to be felled because it was dying.

The clock's design is the result of collaboration between Mr Georgiou, Mark Leaver, of the Enfield Business and Retailers' Association, and graphic designer Karen Cox.

The body of the tower was manufactured by Dave Plummer, of Triangle Metal Works, which is based just around the corner in Green Lanes, while the clock has been made by the Hawkins Clock Company, in Peterborough.

The project has been funded through the council's Residents' Priority Fund.

The business association received £25,000 in 2012 and Mr Costas is considering spending money out of its coffers to paint some parts of the tower gold.

Palmers Green ward councillor Bambos Charalambous added: "The business association approached myself and other ward councillors about the plan some years ago and we were happy to support it.

"The clock will be unique to the Palmers Green area and I think it will be a nice landmark which will bring more people to come and shop in the area. I hope it goes ahead."

Mr Georgiou said if permission was granted he was hoping the clock would be installed before the end of next month.

Green light expected for town hall development

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

PROPOSALS to turn Southgate Town Hall into flats were set to be approved by councillors last night.

Officers have recommended Enfield Council's planning committee approve plans to convert the office building into 19 flats and for the construction of a new part-three, part-four-storey block of 18 affordable homes with balconies behind the town hall, in Green Lanes, Palmers Green.

In November, a deal was struck between the council and developer Hollybrook Homes to extend and convert the old town hall.

The adjacent library will also be refurbished as part of the deal.

But the proposals have been fiercely opposed by residents living in Palmerston Crescent, whose gardens face the site.

Mother-of-two Jennifer Yennaris, 34, said: "They are not considering us as neighbours. The private gardens that we have are giving us a better quality of life and it's rare in this area."

"But the residents in the new building will be overlooking us from their balconies and we will have much more noise.

"It's going to bring down the value of our homes as well."

The residents have been supported by Enfield Southgate MP David Burrowes, who has called on the council to extend consultation on the scheme.

He told the Advertiser: "New homes need to be built, but this is not the right place for it."

"The principal issue is that the council has given the green light for some affordable homes, but it represents a loss of a community asset. We are getting small change for selling the family silver."

"We should be getting much more from a building that is dedicated for community use."

"I believe they should have looked more seriously at options for a school there."

The council has said the scheme will provide much-needed affordable housing and give residents an improved library, while retaining the original building.

Asked how much the council had sold the site for, a spokeswoman said: "The signing of a contract to commence works

Columnist

Howard
Medwell

Leftside

FOR most of us, it isn't the big political issues that affect our view of the world, it's the little, low-level problems – boring, irritating problems, like pavement cyclists, pavement spitters and raw sewage flowing into the street.

My dad used to tell me that I couldn't tell faeces from clay, although he didn't say "faeces".

But at 65, I trust my nostrils to tell me exactly what I am walking through as I make my way along to Angel Corner.

There is a manhole cover at the top of Cuthbert Road, Upper Edmonton. Frequently, a translucent liquid seeps from around this manhole cover. Vehicles, parking illegally, splash it up on to the pavement.

The first time I rang up about it was 2011. Other local residents have been more assiduous.

You phone Enfield Council, the Highways Agency, the privatised water company. You get piped music, robot voices, please hold... sorry, not our responsibility, mate.

Once upon a time, organisations like trade unions, community associations, even local Labour Party branches might have stuck up for us on an issue like this.

I fantasise about leading a demo, pouring bucketfuls of the stuff over the plush carpets at the water company's headquarters.

No, the modern way is to find an individual solution to a collective problem.

Don't turn to the council, turn to an estate agent. Do your house up, sell it and move to a nicer area instead.

Be a winner and leave the losers – your erstwhile neighbours – to traipse through the sewage!

Friends bidding to get war memorial restored

WHILE I support the erection of a war memorial dedicated to the servicemen and women who have lost their lives since World War II (Advertiser, April 9), I would urge Councillor Chris Bond not to neglect the existing war memorials in the borough.

In Broomfield Park we have a garden of remembrance and war memorial, dedicated to all the servicemen and women from the (old) borough of Southgate who lost their lives in the two world wars.

This was opened in July 1929.

However, it has been sadly neglected in recent years, resulting in the pond losing its fountain and the sundial its brass plate.

Only one of the original six benches – built from wood from HMS Dido, which sank in 1916 during World War I – is still standing.

The actual World War I memorial is suffering from damp, caused by overgrown ivy, so that the wooden roof is in danger of collapsing and the walls are covered in black mould.

In fact, even the memorial plaques, which were replaced by the council after they were stolen in 2009, suffer from damp whenever it rains.

The Friends of Broomfield Park are applying to the War Memorials Trust for a grant to restore the garden of remembrance and war memorial.

Damp issues: The war memorial in Broomfield Park

However, the trust will not cover any work which is classed as essential repairs and is the responsibility of Enfield Council.

Even if we are successful in our bid, we will only receive a maximum of 75 per cent of the grant, so the Friends still have to find ways to raise a substantial amount of money.

As 2014 is the centenary of the outbreak of World War I, the Friends would like the garden and war memorial to be restored in time for the centenary on August 4.

But, if that's not possible, at least in time for the annual Armistice Day service held in the garden on November 11. Sue Younger
Friends of Broomfield Park

□ THE announcement that a new war memorial to servicemen and women who gave their lives for their country after World War II is to be applauded. The project has been long in the making.

However, veterans with whom I have spoken are unhappy with Enfield Council's choice of site – St Michael's Green, in Chase Side – as they think that it will be hidden away from the town centre.

One thinks immediately of Enfield's more prominent war memorial in Windmill Hill/Chase Side and the one that has been erected facing the Civic Centre, in Silver Street, Enfield, to commemorate Arctic Convoy veterans.

Surely, the veterans ask, it would be more appropriate to consider this latter site, where it would be seen by the general public – some of whom are related to the post-World War II fallen? John Mitchell

What are your experiences of home care?

WITH headlines like this, it must be a very worrying time for anyone who has to rely on the service of home care – "Age UK say figures show how increasingly desperate the care crisis is in" and "Cash-strapped authorities limiting provisions with tougher rules" (The Mail, December 18).

The government wants more patients to be treated in their own homes to free up beds in the hospital setting.

Local authorities are in charge of this budget, but how much is being allocated to this vital service?

And, more importantly, how much time is being allocated to each person at any one visit?

Many patients requiring home care services are often elderly, frail and vulnerable, live on their own and cannot speak up for themselves.

Therefore, if the care which they are receiving is of a poor standard, who will know?

So much emphasis is being put on the standards in our hospitals, but what about home care? How good is the care that people are receiving in their own homes and who regulates this?

Are you in receipt of home care or do you know someone who is?

I would like to hear your views on this very important subject. Please email me at info@cdiff-support.co.uk

Don't drive away shoppers

RE: "Cycle-friendly streets do boost town centres" (Letters, Advertiser, March 9).

David Hughes grudgingly accepts that cycling will not replace the car.

Will he accept that ownership of a car by much of the population is their choice and, as such, governments and local authorities should keep up with the rising car numbers and provide sufficient space for them to move around?

His ongoing complaint about single occupancy is misplaced because, if you do buy a car, you will want to use it as much as possible.

How and when does Mr Hughes use his car?

I am not anti-cycling. I rode a bicycle for a number of years, but the comfort of a car and its carrying capacity persuaded me to change over. Mr Hughes sees no difference between multiple occupancy of a car and groups of chattering cyclists.

The answer is in the Highway Code, which says that cyclists should only ride two abreast and down to single file on narrow and busy roads.

As for pedestrians spending more than motorists, who are they? Do they arrive by car, bus, bicycle, or are they residents walking from home?

One thing is certain – if all the car parks in the town centre closed, then the shopping area would die and there would be no town centre to praise.

Mayor must protect people renting

RENTS in the capital are rising rapidly, even in what used to be seen as the cheaper areas. A quarter of London households now rely on housing benefit as increasing numbers have to use it to top up their wages.

The London Assembly housing committee has found that most landlords, especially buy-to-let, are cautious about letting to housing benefit claimants.

We also found private landlords are increasingly terminating assured short-hold tenancies prematurely. This has risen fourfold since 2010.

The Mayor of London has to act fast. We need him to lobby the government for powers to regulate rents and to make long-term, secure tenancies a regular option in this country.

Behind the wheel: West Lea student Rhys Miller, 17, with driving instructor Sean Lawrence

Special lessons steer school pupils in the right direction

By Roisin O'Connor

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

PUPILS at a special school had the chance to get behind the wheel last week.

Students over the age of 17 at West Lea School, in Haselbury Road, Edmonton, spent a sunny spring day practising in automatic and manual cars, testing their multi-tasking skills and driving theory.

Parent Janet Beckles came up with the idea for trial driving lessons for West Lea pupils and approached the school's community and enterprise manager Julian Halford to see if it was possible.

Mrs Beckles, 50, said: "One of my friends is a driving instructor and I asked him if he thought we could set something up."

"For the kids, it's about independence – making them feel confident about themselves."

"It's about being able to do something that everyone else says they can't."

Ten pupils took part in the morning and afternoon sessions, which were run by the Hertfordshire Action on Disability charity, and were split into sections so that students could rotate and learn about different aspects of driving.

While some worked on their theory and hazard perception, others had a practical session for about 45 minutes.

Instructors were available to talk to parents about licensing, insurance and lessons and feedback were given to the pupils and parents at the end of the sessions.

Mr Halford, 53, is hoping that more sessions will be held over the summer.

"It's important to create these kind of opportunities," he said.

"I'm also working to try and set up a service which would be more about making new friends."

"The school's ethos is about independence and inclusion opportunities."

Rhys Miller, 17, was thrilled at the chance to drive one of the Ford Fiastas.

He is hoping to train as a motor engineer and said that if he passed his test he would be able to drive his friends around.

"I think it's all about learning new skills," Rhys said.

"Hopefully, I'll be alright at driving. Turning the corners is quite hard, but it's a lot of fun."

New boiler: David O'Neill, of Associated Response, which is involved in the scheme

By Roisin O'Connor

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A SCHEME to help vulnerable people save money on their energy bills and reduce carbon emissions has been launched in the borough.

Associated Response, a heating and plumbing maintenance business, in Riverside Gardens, Enfield Town, is taking part in the ECO Affordable Warmth Scheme to find ways to assist those suffering from fuel poverty.

They include installing a new energy-efficient boiler or insulating homes for free.

In 2009, the Department of Energy and Climate Change estimated that 14.5 per cent of households in the borough were in fuel poverty, compared to 13.3 per cent in London.

Associated Response suggests that fuel costs for a semi-detached, three-bedroom property could be cut by as much as £1,000 if energy efficiency improvements were made.

Anyone on income support or who claims pension credit is eligible for a grant from an energy company, provided he or she is able to produce a letter from the Department for Work and Pensions.

David O'Neill, 42, who deals with customer services for Associated Response, said that there had been a "very positive reaction" from those who had benefited from the government scheme, which, he said, is part of a push by the European Union to reduce carbon emissions.

Mr O'Neill added: "A lot of people, particularly pensioners, don't realise what they are entitled to. You can't survive without hot water and heating."

"This project involves less paperwork and less bureaucracy, and the grant you receive is based on the size of the property."

Anyone wishing to learn more about the scheme should call Associated Response on 020 8366 6420, or email arlco@yahoo.co.uk

Dialysis centre opens

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlnews.co.uk

A NEW service for kidney and diabetes patients has opened its doors.

The Tottenham Hale Kidney and Diabetes Centre, which is run by the Royal Free NHS Foundation Trust – the hospital in Hampstead set to take over the Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust in July – treated its first patients last Monday.

Based in Daneland Walk, it is the UK's largest dialysis unit outside a hospital. With 48 dialysis stations, it has the capacity to treat 270 patients a week.

Dialysis is the process of removing waste and excess water from the blood and is used primarily by people suffering from kidney failure, who have to undergo the process three times a week.

The new centre has replaced the dialysis service at North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton.

Five Royal Free consultants will run clinics at the centre, where it is aimed to treat more people outside hospital through what the trust has described as "a focus on self-care, home dialysis and home therapies".

John Connolly, clinical director of renal services at the Royal Free, said: "This wonderful new centre will offer dialysis and diabetes patients a range of services all under one roof."

"We are thrilled that we can now offer diabetes clinics, transplant assessment clinics, renal vascular clinics and much more in our new centre."

The centre also offers a service for patients with progressive kidney disease, with support from dieticians, psychologists and renal consultants.

The hospital trust aims to increase the chance of patients receiving a kidney transplant and to help more patients to receive therapies in their own homes.

It will offer follow-up appointments for patients who have had a kidney transplant, as well as transplant assessment clinics and a diabetic eye screening service.

The trust is also planning to provide services including GP and patient education sessions, diabetes clinics in partnership with the North Mid and joint health clinics with the Citizens' Advice Bureau.

The second phase of the project will see additional patients from Haringey, who are currently treated in the Mary Rankin, Highgate or Edgware dialysis units, move to the centre next month.

Entries close next week for our Face of Enfield contest

THERE'S one week left to enter yourself into the Face of Enfield competition to represent Pure Hair and Beauty on their marketing material.

The contest, in conjunction with department store Pearsons, the Enfield Advertiser & Gazette and the Aveda specialist salon, in Windmill Hill, Enfield, has received lots of entries, but there is still time to put your hat – and hair – in the ring.

The competition is split into three categories – classic, funky and men's. Entrants are being asked to send in a picture of themselves, including their hair, plus their name, address and a contact number, to faceofenfield@nlhnews.co.uk by next Wednesday, April 30.

A panel of judges from the salon, Pearsons and this paper will then compile a shortlist of candidates, who will be invited to a makeover and photoshoot day at the award-winning salon on either May 18 or 19.

Tas Panteli, owner of the salon, turned to shoppers in Enfield Town last week in a final push for entrants.

Paul told: "We are really excited about this competition and cannot wait to see who has put themselves forward. We want our marketing material to be relevant to our customers, so who best to feature on there but a local person from Enfield."

"Don't worry if you think your hair is not in tip-top condition, we will be able to work with what you give us on the makeover day."

The shortlisted candidates' makeover photos will be published in this newspaper before facing a public telephone vote next month. Those with the most votes will win their categories and the candidate with the highest number of votes will be named overall winner in early June.

Winners will be given a share of £200 vouchers for Pearsons, a bag of goodies from Pure and a framed 10x8 photograph of their winning entry and see their picture used on the salon's branding online and in store.

Police identify man, 23, after body is found in Hilly Fields

POLICE are treating the death of a man whose body was discovered in Hilly Fields last week as unexplained.

Officers were called to the parkland, off Strayfield Road, Clay Hill, north Enfield, shortly before 7am on Wednesday and found the man's body.

They were joined at the scene by the London Ambulance Service and the London Fire Brigade.

Police believe they have identified the man as a 23-year-old foreign national and are still trying to track down his next of kin.

No arrests have been made in connection with the discovery.

Appeal for health visit volunteers

HEALTHWATCH Enfield has launched a recruitment drive to find volunteers for the new organisation.

People who are interested in becoming involved can apply for two key roles, both of which involve talking to patients and service users about their experiences of health and social care services.

Healthwatch carries out statutory Enter and View visits to care homes and hospital wards and needs volunteers to help with this.

It was set up to try and ensure that people have a real say in the way that care is provided in the borough.

It is also looking for people to help with going out into the community and talking to residents.

Lorna Reith, chief executive of Healthwatch Enfield, said: "If you believe that the voice of patients and service users should be heard and are keen to see improvements in health and social care provision, then please contact us."

Volunteer information packs can be found at www.healthwatchenfield.co.uk or by calling 020 8383 6283.

Joe makes his mark in TV kitchen

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A DRIVING examiner wowed the Masterchef judges and made it through to the quarter-finals last week.

Joe Davis, who grew up in Enfield, has been serving up tasty plates of mouth-watering food to his family for years. And after unsuccessful cajoling by friends and relatives his mother finally took matters into her own hands.

"All my family and friends kept telling me I had to do it," the 34-year-old admitted. "I was never brave enough, but in the end my mum surprised me by applying for me and before I knew it I was on the show."

The amateur chef, who was born in Chase Farm Hospital, grew up in Broadlands Avenue, Enfield Highway, and graduated from the University of Hertfordshire with an economics degree, impressed on his way to the quarter-finals, where he served up a meal of panfried fillet of pork, with pigs' cheeks and bacon truffles, along with spring vegetables and a swede and carrot purée.

Although the long-running TV cookery talent show, now in its tenth series, is renowned for making the contestants sweat under the glare of judges, critics and professional chefs, Joe told the Advertiser that on set the atmosphere is a little more relaxed.

Cooking up a treat: Joe Davis reached the Masterchef quarter-finals

"John Torode and Gregg Wallace aren't scary, they're normal professional guys with a passion for food, just like the contestants. They really want you to do well, but they don't take prisoners when you don't," he said.

However, his Masterchef foray ended in Friday's quarter-final, where Joe said he was proud of his performance, but "ultimately it was not to be".

Joe's favourite go-to meal to serve up of an evening is "a giant seafood paella".

And if he had to choose any one dish in the world to cook and devour?

"A beautifully marbled, double rib of beef on a hot sunny day on the BBQ," he said, "so it's lovely and charred on the outside and blushing pink in the middle."

"It can't be beaten in summer weather and goes perfectly with a nice cold beer."

Are you sitting on a small fortune? Does your loft hide a secret treasure? Free Antiques Valuation Roadshow visits Enfield.

One of the longest running TV programmes is "The Antiques Roadshow" where items are valued and a summary is given. Often owners are delighted at the worth of the piece that may have been ignored for decades.

Specialist valuers Newland Antiques have also been staging Valuation Roadshows for many years, and invite you bring your items for a free assessment with immediate cash for those who wish to sell - with no commission fees.

In almost every home there is a dark corner or a loft where some neglected piece lies that can be turned into a cash windfall.

Many stories exist of the surprised delight that these experts bring to visitors: a retired couple brought along a box of bits and pieces that had been left to them, they thought that the collection of oddments might realise perhaps £100. Imagine their surprise when they sold their "trinkets" for over £2,500!

Experiences like this are not unusual and this Roadshow will no doubt see similar happy events. So search through those lofts and cupboards and bring along your hidden treasures where Newland Antiques' specialist valuers will give you an appraisal free of charge. ## 2012 venue lined up for swim and run series

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A MONTHLY aquathlon series is being launched at the Lee Valley White Water Centre, offering budding athletes the opportunity to take part in an exciting new sporting event.

The London 2012 Olympic venue, in Waltham Cross, is the setting for the aquathlon, which begins with an open water swim in the centre's lake over two distances – either 250 or 500metres – followed by a three or 5.5-kilometre run around the River Lee Country Park.

Simon Ricketts, centre manager, said: "The flat lake at Lee Valley White Water Centre provides an excellent open swim facility as the water is clean and filtered with good access in and out.

"This is a huge advantage over most open water lakes and will be especially attractive for beginners."

"The run through the River Lee Country Park is also flat, scenic and free of traffic."

The aquathlon series will run on the second Tuesday of every month from May until September and the first race on May 6 starts at 7.30pm with registration available an hour earlier.

Each event will take place under British Triathlon rules and the last event will be held on September 2.

Participants over the separate distances will be identified by different coloured swim hats and race numbers. They must be aged 18 or older on the day of the race.

The entry fee is £15, or £12 for members of the British Triathlon Federation.

New flats sold months in advance

FLATS at a new development of 29 homes have sold out months ahead of schedule.

Hundreds of people registered an interest in the development by Fairview New Homes, called Vogue, and sales quickly followed.

The flats are being built on the site of a former NHS building in Eaton Road, Enfield Town.

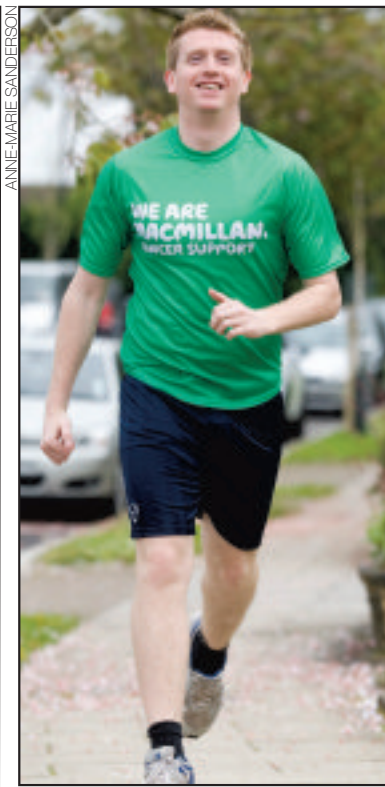

Fairview sales director Steven Allenby said: "Vogue is an unusual development with an enviable combination of appealing features.

"Enfield Town [railway station] is less than five minutes' walk and from there you can be in central London in just over half an hour."

The private block of flats will have enhanced security features and underground parking.

People buying the one, two and three-bedroom flats were from all ages and backgrounds, with most already living locally.

Fairview New Homes' next development in Enfield Town will be in Cecil Road, with more details on the scheme being released later this year.

On the run: Jack Murphy will be doing at least 17 miles a day for two weeks

Jack off to Cornwall on holiday... but will have to run at least 17 miles a day just to get there

By Roisin O'Connor
newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A FUNDRAISER has set himself the challenge of running to Cornwall with nothing but a tent and a few spare clothes on his back.

Jack Murphy, 24, of The Vale, Southgate, is hoping to raise funds and awareness of the work of Macmillan Cancer Support during his two-week adventure next month.

The fleet-footed fundraiser, who works as a service delivery manager at Emagine Consulting, in Mayfair, central London, has lost family members to cancer.

And after seeing close friends suffer from the disease he decided to set himself a daunting challenge. He is taking a fortnight off work and for those two weeks from May 3 he will be running a minimum of 17 miles per day to raise funds for the charity.

He will have nothing but a tent and a few spare clothes strapped to his back and hopes that the goodwill of people along the way will provide accommodation and food – as well as somewhere to wash his clothes. And Jack is not allowed to use any other means of transport than his own two feet.

If all goes to plan, then the marathon task should end in Cornwall, somewhere close to the Tamar Bridge.

Jack said: "I think this is something that will speak to people because it's an interesting thing to do for charity.

"I'm very nervous, but also excited about how it's going to turn out."

His Herculean task has already struck a chord with people, with Jack having been pledged £1,155 in donations as we went to press – almost double his target of £600.

This is not the first time Jack has gone the distance for the charity, which supports those diagnosed with cancer and their families.

So far he has run three marathons in aid of Macmillan Cancer Support, raising around £500 each time.

He joked: "I have to go back to work the day after I get back, but to be honest I might ask for the day off!"

Primary pupil shortlisted in Amnesty International young reporter competition

A SCHOOLGIRL has been short-listed for a young journalist award by international charity Amnesty International.

Ciara Griffin, from Merryhills Primary School, in Bincote Road, Enfield, has made the top three in the Young Human Rights Reporter of the Year award.

The ten-year-old has seen off more than 7,000 other entrants in Amnesty's Youth Awards.

Her article was judged by a panel of editors, authors and industry professionals, including Christie Watson and Sita Brahmachari.

Ciara's submission focused on Syria and the effect the conflict has had on the country's children.

She wrote: "I feel that people often take the life they have for granted – that everyone lives like them. But not everyone does.

"Many people, young and old, don't live like us. They don't have the privileges we do.

"So many people in Syria have had to flee their homes, but they can't go back. They don't have that choice."

Author Ms Brahmachari said that she was particularly impressed with Ciara's entry. "The beginning was incredibly strong and the writer really got inside of the situation," she said.

"I could really feel the voice of the author from the beginning to the end. This article followed a very cohesive and heartfelt argument. It touched me."

Kate Allen, director of Amnesty International UK, added: "Journalism plays such a key role in exposing human rights abuses across the world. Amnesty is committed to encouraging the journalists of tomorrow and I am delighted to see so many young people pick up a pen and show a real interest in the world around them.

"The talent on display this year has been truly exceptional. It will be a hard choice to pick the eventual winner."

The awards are supported by The Guardian newspaper photography charity PhotoVoice and secondary school magazine SecEd.

The overall winners will be announced at an awards ceremony at Amnesty International UK's headquarters, in east London, next Wednesday.

Class act from a group of outstanding people

MANUEL
HARLAN

By Roisin O'Connor

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

THE latest work by writer David Lindsay-Abaire tackles the issue of class in America with aplomb – a snappy, smart script and outstanding performances bringing this much-lauded production to the London stage.

Imelda Staunton plays Margie, from working-class south Boston, or “Southie”.

Margie can barely pay the rent, is the single mother of a disabled daughter and, to top it all off, has just lost her job as a dollar-store cashier.

Encouraged by friend Jean, and in pure desperation, she gets in touch with Mike, one of the “lucky ones” who got out of the old neighbourhood and is now a successful doctor.

Pushing and shoving, Margie gains an invitation to a party at Mike’s house, where she hopes to get a look into the new “lace-curtain Irish” life that Mike has made for himself.

The consequent reaction to her old friend’s home, and all its strange, awkward social conventions, is spectacular.

She is loud, uncomfortable, boisterous, and often completely out of her depth.

“How’s the wine?” Mike asks. “How the f*** should I know?” Margie responds.

Lindsay-Abaire is known for writing fantastic leading roles for women and there is so much to Margie – warmth, humour, desperation, vindictiveness. She is not the tired, archetypal “strong female character”.

She has flaws and weaknesses and the audience are not requested or encouraged to like her all of the time.

Other strong performances come from Lloyd Owen as Mike, who reacts strongly to any threats to the comfortable world in which he lives.

June Watson is delightful as Margie’s miserly landlady Dottie, while Lorraine Ashbourne teeters just on the right side of scene-stealing as Jean, her brutally honest best friend.

The play is a criticism of America’s consistently delusional belief: that if you work hard you will be rewarded.

Using Margie as a tool to project guilt on to Mike and his wife, who have forgotten what it is like to struggle, plus a smoothly inter-changing design by Hildegard Bechtler, Good People shines a light on the uncomfortable truth of the American class system.

□ Good People is at the Noel Coward Theatre in St Martin’s Lane and is booking until June 14. Ticket prices vary from £10 to £52.50. The box office is on 0844 482 5130.

Reunited: Margie (Imelda Staunton) and, top right, Mike (Lloyd Owen) meet at a party at his house

Chickenshed to revive resident writer's story

By Roisin O'Connor

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

CHICKENSHEDE Theatre is bringing the life of one extraordinary member back to the stage, celebrating its writer-in-residence.

Paula Rees was born with cerebral palsy and medical experts told her family that she would never achieve anything.

But her parents fought hard for her to be appreciated as more than a statistic.

Paula's Story, which opens at the theatre in Chase Side, Southgate, next Wednesday, is set in the late 1970s and 1980s and tells of a journey of love and the breakthrough moment when mother and daughter communicate for the first time, through to the discovery of Paula's talent as a poet, writer and lyricist.

This production, which was originally shown in the studio theatre in 1993, is being revived as part of the inclusive theatre's 40th anniversary year.

Mary Ward, 69, Chickenshed co-founder and director of Paula's Story, said: "The political response to the original show was huge, so we're hoping that things will be the same this time round."

Head of performance Louise Perry, 43, said: "When we first started talking about doing this again, we wondered if much has changed in the last 30 years.

True story: Paula Rees

"There's still a lot of awareness that needs to be raised, so the characters in this show are still relevant."

Paula, 44, says that Chickenshed is a place where she has been able to work with "the most brilliant range of people".

"With Chickenshed I can write lyrics which are put to music and become what some people say are beautiful," she said.

"I feel that I was born for a purpose. I am valued and I have something to offer the world."

Louise added: "This is the unique thing about Chickenshed and very much a part of our ethos - to be able to include those who might otherwise struggle to find a place in today's society."

Paula's Story is running from April 30 until May 17. Tickets are £10 (£8 concessions) and the box office is on 020 8292 9222 or at www.chickenshed.org.uk

Thriller aims to get audience debating more serious issues

By Roisin O'Connor

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A NEW film about racial tensions on a university campus will open in cinemas across the country this week.

Arjun and Alison is a revenge thriller set at Birmingham University, with the city serving as an ethnically diverse backdrop.

The film will have a limited release via Cineworld Cinemas from Friday.

Playing the lead role is Shiv Jhala, 27, who was born and raised in Edmonton and studied at a film school in Mumbai, the entertainment capital of India.

The actor told the Advertiser that the film is about "creating debate" over issues – not only concerning racial tension, but also other forms of discrimination.

"There are always different diverse communities coming into the country, so it is definitely a relevant topic," said Shiv.

"First and foremost, films are about entertainment. Hopefully, this is something people will enjoy watching – they'll get their money's worth.

"But it's also so they can ask themselves questions, 'Have I been discriminated against?', 'Have I discriminated against someone else?'"

Shiv talks about the struggle he has faced within the film industry against typecasting, saying that there are still "a lot of stereotypes" which make it difficult for Indian actors to play more than one kind of role.

"I spent six years trying to find the right part before I auditioned for Arjun and Alice," he said. "We have an amazing cast – I really had to raise the bar and push myself.

"Working with everyone on the set has been a brilliant experience."

Rather than sitting back and waiting for change to happen, Shiv has begun co-writing his own film, which he hopes will create a new spin on a successful genre.

In on the act: Shiv Jhala plays one of the two lead roles in Arjun and Alison

ANNE-MARE SANDERSON

"It's a buddy movie about two boys from an Indian village," he explained.

"You have to think as commercially as possible when you're writing and it's very difficult to write comedy.

"But I wanted to put a different edge on what is currently a successful genre in film."

Arjun and Alison was selected for last year's St Tropez International Film Festival and was nominated for best film. Monique Squeri, who plays Alison, picked up the best actress award at the same festival.

House prices How and Why?

The beginning of this year shows promise for house prices. This could be one of the best times to get into the property market, but it's a gamble still, as everything is.

This year's start off was great. January and February saw a surge in consumer confidence which has resonated across the globe with the Great British Pound gaining strength over its main competitors, which has maintained throughout March and April. Foreign investors also see this as a good opportunity to get in on a cash cow that's due to grow further and faster than originally expected.

This almost certainly will attract foreign attention and Lombard Estate will be gearing up for the opportunity of being the management company for many of these foreign investors who are unable to manage their own property as they are not resident in the UK. Here in Enfield and Edmonton, on the border of Middlesex, sees a steep rise in average rental prices compared to its northern counterpart Broxbourne, offering more return on your original investment.

We can expect areas like Edmonton and Enfield to receive a high influx of buyers, with the area being so close to the City of London. It would be great for commuters who aren't quite ready to live in a large scale city, but still want the abundant transport links in and around the area with major routes into London itself.

The council have already invested long term into Edmonton with a scheme known to the community as Bountague Big Local. Where the areas between Bounces Road and Montague Gardens have been granted by the council and supplied by the national lottery, the sum of 1 million pounds over the course of 10 years. To establish and refine the community.

With the current forecast expected by analysts as well as previous statistics, the housing prices should rise steadily, if not faster, so if you are one of those people staring at papers awaiting the fall, it's probably time to come to terms with the new prices.

We at Lombard Estates can help you as an individual with needs that are relevant to your life and way of living, to personalise your purchase and see you through. We give professional advice and will be on your side throughout your housing market experience, whether it be a long or short stay.

Another Seven wonder

By Matt Joy

THE flyweight British marvel – the Caterham Seven 160 – is still going strong, and comes with a very clever and efficient new engine.

The model is dubbed the 160 on account of its power-to-weight ratio, and it gets that on account of a new engine.

Other models in the range still use modern Ford units to good effect, but the 160 gets a three-cylinder turbocharged Suzuki engine of just 660cc. If that doesn't sound like much to you for a sports car, you would be right.

But that's not a problem because some things remain gloriously unchanged – most importantly, the Seven's minimalist approach to everything.

The (optional) doors are canvas and plastic, everything is operated via toggle switches and the standard equipment list includes inertia-reel seatbelts.

There's an honest, retro charm, authentically so because not a huge amount has changed since the Seven began life as a Lotus way back in 1957. The Seven 160 has its own smart logo and, as standard, wears modest steel wheels rather than the usual alloys – and if it looks doesn't raise a smile, look elsewhere.

There's no hiding the fact that the Seven has little space. There is a boot of sorts, but if you have the roof down, that's where it lives. You can squash a couple of bags in there, but that is it.

The cabin is tiny, too, with you and your passenger squished in tightly together. The pay-off comes when you drive it.

The fact that there's very little to the Seven 160 means it weighs just 490kg. The Ford Fiesta weighs twice as much.

So, although the three-cylinder turbo offers only a modest 80bhp, it gets along smartly, particularly thanks to the good torque. The gearshift is meaty and fast with closely stacked ratios, so it will sprint to 60mph in only 6.5 seconds.

Performance is only half the story, however, because it's the Seven's directness that is its great appeal.

The tiny steering wheel is alive in your hands and barely needs more than a quarter turn to send you darting off in another direction. And those skinny tyres offer decent but not excessive grip, so you can enjoy its fantastic balance.

On the one hand, you could say you don't get much for your money with an options list that includes a carpet, a heater and weather protection – but they're not expensive and the base price is just £17,995.

Better still, if you want to build it yourself (Caterham reckons about 60 hours), you can get it for just £14,995 – and it can manage almost 60mpg, if you behave.

If you're an enthusiast and despair at modern cars, the Seven is just the tonic. There are increasingly mad versions that add more power and save even more weight, but the basic recipe is the same. It is an occasional car, but until you've driven one, you can't really say you've driven at all.

If this car was a means of cooking, it would be a barbecue – using it in the rain requires commitment, but when the conditions are right, it's the best thing in the universe.

5. Where shrinkage of advertisement occurs for whatever reasons the advertisement will be charged to the nearest full centimetre. This will NOT apply to the full-page advertisements, which remain full pages even after shrinkage.

6. The Publishers reserve the right to reject an advertisement or to vary it in any way they deem fit, at any time before publication, whether or not the advertisement has already been accepted for publication.

7. Whilst every effort is made to minimise errors in advertisements, mistakes do sometimes occur. ## Narrow win for the Skolars over Hemel

THE London Skolars overcame the sending off of Sam Wellings to edge to a 27-24 victory at Hemel Stags in rugby league's Kingstone Press Championship One on Friday.

Wellings saw red with just under 20 minutes remaining for a late tackle when the Skolars were leading 18-12, but they managed to hold firm under pressure to secure a second successive victory.

The visitors got off to a good start as Martyn Smith scored a try which Matt Bradley converted, but the Stags hit back through scores from BJ Swindells and Mitch Barbera – both converted by Swindells.

However, a converted try from Smith got the Skolars back on level terms before the interval and they regained the lead when Louis Robinson touched down for another converted try early in the second half.

The dismissal of Wellings seemed to spur on the visitors and they extended their advantage when Judd Greenhalgh scored a try which Bradley again converted.

But the Stags came back strongly as Eddie Mbaraga and Aaron Small scored converted tries in quick succession to level the scores with five minutes remaining.

The hosts looked the more likely winners at this stage, but the Skolars roused themselves for one final effort and a Bradley drop-goal edged them back into the lead before the same player slotted over a late penalty to round off the scoring.

The London Skolars' next match is at the York City Knights on May 4 (3pm).

Impressive performer: Hugo Lloris has been hailed by Tottenham boss Tim Sherwood

KEEPER PRAISED

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

HEAD coach Tim Sherwood has hailed goalkeeper Hugo Lloris after the French international shone again in Tottenham Hotspur's 3-1 win over Fulham on Saturday.

Lloris has been one of Spurs' most consistent performers this season, and he pulled off a string of fine saves to ensure that the side picked up all three points at White Hart Lane – including keeping out a Steve Sidwell penalty.

Lloris has in the past hinted that he might look to leave the club if Spurs fail to secure Champions League football, but Sherwood is confident that he will stay and is well aware of his importance to the side.

"Hugo has never, ever said that we must get into the Champions League or he'll go elsewhere," he said. "Without a doubt, no-one wants him to leave.

"He is a top-drawer keeper – a genuine world-class player. He doesn't say a lot, just gets on with it, and when he's needed he's done brilliantly."

Saturday's match saw Paulinho give Spurs the lead, only for Sidwell to grab an equaliser moments later.

However, the hosts took control of the game in the second half as further goals from Harry Kane and Younes Kaboul sealed victory.

Kane's goal was his third in as many Premier League starts, and the 20-year-old is delighted to have been given the opportunity to make his mark in recent weeks.

"It has been great to get the chance to get the goals," he said. "I obviously have three in three now, and hopefully will get more between now and the end of the season.

"Tim has given me the chance, and at this level you have got to take it. You've got to take your chance every game, and I have been able to do that so far to keep my place in the team. There is competition at every level, and you have to perform at a high standard.

"You can see against Fulham – and in other recent matches – that we've been playing great, we've been scoring goals.

"All the players are focused on the games ahead. We're just taking each game as it comes. We've got three more games and we want to win all three, then wherever we end up, we end up. They are three winnable games and we'll take this into the next one."

Borough remain in contention for title

HARINGEY BOROUGH'S hopes of winning the Essex Senior League title are still alive after they extended their unbeaten run to 17 matches with a comfortable 4-0 victory at Eton Manor on Saturday.

Borough took control from the start of the contest and opened the scoring after just five minutes when Dean Fenton's low cross was turned into the net by Anthony McDonald at the near post.

Fenton doubled the lead with a crisp finish on 14 minutes and the visitors added a third prior to the interval as McDonald provided the finishing touch to a flowing move which was instigated by Daniel Aristidou's mazy run and superb close control.

The second half saw Borough create a succession of chances, but they were only to take one of them through Fenton with 15 minutes remaining.

Meanwhile, last Tuesday had seen Borough secure a crucial 2-0 victory at home to second-placed Enfield (1893).

The deadlock was broken just before half-time when a McDonald free-kick was turned into his own net by Wesley Borghys and Fenton sealed victory with a simple tap-in at the end of a quick break late on.

Having hosted Tower Hamlets last night, Haringey Borough finish their league campaign with home games against Stansted tomorrow (7.45pm) and Takeley on Saturday.

Victory in all three games will guarantee Borough second place in the table and would be enough to see them crowned champions if leaders Great Waking Rovers slip up in their last match.
